A LOVELIER YOU

By Mary Sue Miller

TARGETS FOR DRYNESS. In the winter, a woman's all-over complexion becomes an easy target for dry conditions. Chap roughens the legs; the arms, back and shoulders become scuffed from the friction of heavy clothing.

To offset such damages in one swoop, try an oil soak. Simply slather the entire body with skin oil and allow it to remain on while you relax on a towel for fifteen minutes. Then shower or bathe, using a brush, thick lather and plenty of elbow persuasion.

Day-to-day care can play an enormous part in remedying dryness and in preventing it, too. Using a cold cream or lanolin-loaded soap is a great help. For another, there is a lipodermic bath oil or body oil shower mist.

A daily rubdown with hand or body lotion both protects and softens the skin. Lotions containing hormones, silicones and moisturizers have been proven particularly effective. Newly formulated with silicones, glycerine-and-rosewater in liquid or cream form also rates as a skin lotion.

Put all advices together and your skin will be lovelier at the end of winter than at the start!

LEGLINE TRIMMERS

If your individual problem is heavy legs, send for my new leaflet LEGLINE TRIMMERS, which contains spot reducing exercises that will meet your individual needs, whether for thighs, knees, calves or ankles, or for contouring your entire legline. Write me in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 5 cents in coin to cover handling.

Sex Conversation Topic Among Chattering Fish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many fishes and other sea creatures not only talk—"their talk may be as meaningful as much of our own."

That is the word from Richard H. Backus of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution as reported this week by the office of naval research.

Sea animals make noises for a variety of reasons—to find food, coax up a mate, or bluff an aggressor.

It is also for a variety of reasons that Backus and his colleagues eavesdrop on sea animals — to develop techniques for locating fish or other commercial marine life, for example, and to improve use of listening devices for detecting enemy submarines.

You have to be acquainted with fish sounds, Backus said, to know whether to call an alert or dismiss what the detector reports as so much fish talk.

Much marine conversation, Backus said, "is believed to be closely associated to sexual activity."

Male drums drum and croakers croak to summon the female. The toad fish makes a sound like a loud boat-whistle, the male and female of one kind of goby exchange low grunts, sea horses click, and the male of a certain porpoise importunes his mate with "peculiar yelping sounds."

Some porpoises apparently use echo-location. By the reflected sound of their own voices, they orient themselves in the lightless depths.

Mother and young of the Bottlenose porpoises converse to keep the family together. Toss food to a captive purpoise and it will make "mewing and rasping" noises which attract others to the table.

WARNING SIGNAL

Damselfishes also make noise while feeding but apparently as a warning to other damselfishes against poaching. In the presence of danger the squirrelfish barks to alert his follows.

The burrfish, swellfish, sculpin, flying gurnard, sea robin, toadfish, and spiny lobster whine, drum, grunt, or make other noises when a predator swims into their ken.

"Supposedly," Backus said, "the sudden sound so startles the predator that he momentarily hesitates or relaxes his hold, whereupon the prey escapes."

125 Loggers Arrested For Wrecking Camp

GRAND FALLS, Nfld. (CP) —A 45-man RCMP squad carrying sidearms and wearing steel helmets rounded up more than 125 striking loggers Saturday after a raid on two nearby woods camps.

The men, members of the International Woodworkers of America, were marched 10 miles in sub-zero weather to the highway where three big buses took them into Grand Falls. On arrival here, the loggers were herded into the armory transformed into a temporary jail.

Police said the men will be charged in connection with the early morning ransacking of two Anglo-Newfoundland Development Co. woods camps at Sandy Lake, about 20 miles from here.

Wives and children of the strikers greeted the buses here, cheering and weeping.

Police mustered all available personnel after the word came that a group of about 200 men had broken into Burt Matthews' logging camp at Sandy Lake. A company spokesman, Public Relations Officer Ewart Young, said the group were IWA strikers. Matthews' camp was ransacked and another demolished.

'Jack the Ripper' Named at Last?

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard is checking out a report which may result in closing out the docket on "Jack the Ripper" after 70 years, according to the London newspaper Reynolds News.

"Jack the Ripper" was one of the most infamous murderers of all time. He brutally murdered six women in London's gas-lit streets in the 1880s.

He was never caught and never identified.

The Sunday Reynolds News said that an 82-year-old retired blacksmith named George Henry Edwards told Scotland Yard that "Jack the Ripper" was his cousin Frank, now dead.

It quoted Edwards as saying he kept silent until now because "otherwise I might have been done in too."

According to the newspaper, Edwards told Scotland Yard of a night in 1888 when a woman was murdered in London's east end, one of the series of killings which terrorized London.

A few hours later, according to Edwards, his cousin Frank arrived at the Edwards home. Frank, an accountant, carried an attache case in which were a razor and a bloodstained collar.

The newspaper quoted Edwards as saying Frank re a bowler hat, goldrim spectacles and had a black moustache. A newspaper report of that murder said a policeman spotted a man wearing a bowler hat, goldrim glasses and with a moustache walking away from the murder scene.

Reynolds News says Edwards told Scotland Yard Frank was always saying he hated women. He said Frank picked quarrels easily, mainly over women.

Mrs. Bertha Parkhurst, 75, another of Frank's cousins, was quoted as saying of him: "Women in his opinion were just no good. I have a vague memory he was supposed to have murdered a woman in London but I can't remember the details."

Extravagant Yanks Toss Away Cancer

LONDON (Reuters) — British medical experts have decided extravagant American smokers who throw away long cigaret butts may be avoiding lung cancer.

A group found that the butts Americans toss away are 65 per cent longer than those discarded by British smokers —which may account for the lower lung cancer mortality rate in the United States.

Writing in the British Medical Journal, the team — two members of the statistical research unit of the medical research council and two members of the social survey division of the central office of information—said in many countries there was a close relationship between lung cancer rates and cigaret consumption 25 or 20 years ago.

"For the U.S.A.," the experts said, it has, however, often been suggested that the habit of throwing away a large unsmoked butt may contribute to the relatively low mortality."

Americans, who have less than half the lung cancer rate of Britons, throw away butts averaging 1¼ inches in length. Thrifty Britons leave butts measuring only three-quarters of an inch.

"Such a very great difference in the British and American habits at the present time makes it at least possible that the greater butt length in the U.S.A. can account for much of the relative deficiency in its lung cancer mortality," the team concluded.

17 Missing In Icy Gale

HALIFAX (CP)—An RCAF Lancaster from Torbay, Nfld., took off Monday night to comb an area of the wind-whipped Atlantic off southeastern Newfoundland where the St. John's trawler Blue Wave was reported capsizing in a gale, with 17 men aboard.

A 60-mile an-hour wind whipped the cold Atlantic into 25-foot waves.

Other trawlers and coastal freighters arrived here coated with ice, reporting the worst weather of the winter.
